

[PDF] Children in Danger: Coping with the Consequences of Community Violence (A joint publication in the Jossey-Bass social and behavioral science series and the Jossey-Bass education series)

Children in Danger: Coping with the Consequences of Community Violence (A joint publication in the Jossey-Bass social and behavioral science series and the Jossey-Bass education series)

James Garbarino, Nancy Dubrow, Kathleen Kostelny, Carole Pardo

Download PDF | ePub | DOC | audiobook | ebooks*

 Download

 Read Online

#3483487 in Books 1992-05-29 Original language: English PDF # 1 9.25 x 6.25 x .751, #File Name: 1555424163262 pages | File size: 67.Mb

James Garbarino, Nancy Dubrow, Kathleen Kostelny, Carole Pardo : Children in Danger: Coping with the Consequences of Community Violence (A joint publication in the Jossey-Bass social and behavioral science series and the Jossey-Bass education series) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Children in Danger: Coping with the Consequences of Community Violence (A joint publication in the Jossey-Bass social and behavioral science series and the Jossey-Bass education series):

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Good author By Branson Mom Good book, sad topic, great writing
1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. All Our Children By Nancy Avoleso So many of our children experience violence in their homes and communities. I've heard James Garbarino speak several times and he does have a pulse on what is happening and ideas on what we can do about it. For anyone working with youth, buy the book, read it, and then do something more to help your own community.
0 of 0 people found the following review helpful.
Five Stars By jesusr Great book for that price...

By the time they were five, virtually all the children in a public housing project had firsthand knowledge of shootings, stabblings, and homicide. They lived not in Beirut but Chicago. Now the authors reveal how chronic violence affects a child's growth, exploration, and psychological development and show how teachers and social workers can help "to restore the child to childhood".

"Children in Danger is a triumph of compassionate scholarship, a lucid application of state-of-the-art trauma research to the challenges faced by children growing up in our urban battle fields." --San Francisco Chronicle "A stunning, must-read book for anyone interested in how community violence affects children's and teacher's development. Even better, it's a road map for school administrators and teachers on what they can do to help these children deal with the chronic violence in their lives." --Bill Harris, founder, KidsPac, a political action committee for children "This valuable book offers insight and guidance to the professional who must help children cope with the cruel challenge of violence and death in their daily lives." --Edward Zigler, Sterling Professor of Psychology, Yale University "[Children in Danger] is such a compelling account of the ways in which children are affected by living in communities where danger and violence are a way of life, that one hopes it will be read by policymakers at all levels of government who are concerned about the fate of an ever-growing number of children in our society." --Contemporary Psychology

About the Author
JAMES GARBARINO is co-director of the Family Life Development Center and professor of human development at Cornell University. Author of fifteen other books, he formerly served as president of the Erikson Institute for Advanced Study in Child Development. NANCY DUBROW is director of the International Child Welfare Group of the Taylor Institute in Chicago. She is also a consultant to international organizations, including UNICEF and the World Health Organization. KATHLEEN KOSTELNY is director of the Project on Children and Violence and senior research associate at the Erikson Institute for Advanced Study in Child Development. For more than a decade, she has been conducting research on the impact of violence on children. CAROLE PARDO is a child development specialist with a concentration in the area of "children at risk for developmental harm." From 1990 to 1995, she worked as a program associate on the Children in Danger project at the Erikson Institute.