Excellent Habitat Primer By Rex Spivey Very well-written synopsis of Habitat for Humanity with powerful Biblical tie-ins to Habitat's work. Would be particularly useful for a faith community class, e.g., Sunday School class. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Ehh...By Greg Bahnsen BurnerIt's all nice to build houses for people who don't have them, but it seems to be suggesting let's just ignore all our religious beliefs and work together. We can work together to build houses and do good for the world, but don't water down what you believe just because it offends someone else.

Intended primarily for use in congregations and by general readers who are interested in the issue of affordable housing and homelessness, Reckford tells the story of how Habitat has touched the lives of people around the world and is transforming not only those receiving housing but those who participate as builders. The final chapter helps individuals and groups take a "justice, mercy, and humility" self-check and lays out a list of action suggestions. It includes an online small group Leader's Guide and participant Study Guide.

"...a great guide for individuals and groups who want to become involved but lack the tools." -- The Honorable Jack Kemp, former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development"Jonathan Reckford has captured stories and experiences that tell the true meaning of 'love thy neighbor as thyself.'..." -- Janet Huckabee, First Lady of Arkansas and coordinator for Governor's Wives Women Build ProgramAbout the AuthorJonathan Reckford is Chief Executive Officer of Habitat for Humanity. He brings vast experience as an executive in business as well as his most recent work as executive pastor of Christ Presbyterian Church of Edina, Minnesota, USA.
