Hazel Smith : Hungry for Peace: International Security, Humanitarian Assistance, and Social Change in North Korea before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Hungry for Peace: International Security, Humanitarian Assistance, and Social Change in North Korea:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Good for an opposing viewBy NAH LIANG TUANGIIs provides a contrarian view on North Korea but appears biased. I would recommend it for anyone seeking to round out a DPRK research library.2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. An impressive, scholarly, and in-depth study of the international relief efforts in North KoreaBy Midwest Book ReviewHungry For Peace: International Security, Humanitarian Assistance, And Social Change In North Korea by Hazel Smith (Professor of International Relations, University of Warwick, England) is an impressive, scholarly, and in- depth study of the international relief efforts in North Korea. With an informed and informative series of chapters ranging from "Preventing War and Forging Peace", to Humanitarian Assistance and Human Security", to "Intelligent Intervention for a Stable Peace", Professor Smith presents an eye-opening account of the direct association that she had with the North Korean peoples, particularly the famine that struck in the 1990's. Hungry For Peace is very strongly recommended for all non-specialist general readers with an interest in International Studies and 20th Century Korean History for the truly potent message it presents.

This revealing and challenging study of the impact of famine on North Korea not only significantly enlarges our understanding of that hermetic country but also urges us to reassess how we deal with it.

About the AuthorHazel Smith is professor of international relations at the University of Warwick in England. She has traveled widely in North Korea in her capacity as a consultant and program adviser to UN agencies and private humanitarian organizations.
