From University of Illinois Press : In Tender Consideration: Women, Families, and the Law in Abraham Lincoln's Illinois before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised In Tender Consideration: Women, Families, and the Law in Abraham Lincoln's Illinois:

The treatment of destitute widows, jilted brides, and illegitimate children in antebellum Illinois

ADVANCE PRAISE "Taken together, the essays contribute to grounding Lincoln in time and place. They also contribute to a considerably more precise understanding of how private citizens managed their relationships with the state and the social order in the first half of the nineteenth century." -- Linda K. Kerber, author of No Constitutional Right to Be Ladies: Women and the Obligations of Citizenship About the Author Daniel W. Stowell, the director of the Papers of Abraham Lincoln project, is the author of Rebuilding Zion: The Religious Reconstruction of the South, 1863-1877.
