Angel Kwolek-Folland presents an authorititive, much-needed survey of women in business from the 1600s to the present day. She introduces some of the women--famous, infamous, and forgotten--who have been central to business throughout US history as workers, managers, and professionals. This stimulating narrative challenges our expectations about both the history of women and the history of business as it focuses on the changing legal and social climate for women's economic activities through the centuries.

The single best history of the varied roles women have played in American business from the colonial period to the present day. Mansel Blackford, Ohio State UniversityA masterful, pathbreaking study that fills a huge gap in historical literature. Kwolek-Folland deserves a wide audience of scholars, students, and general readers. Edwin J. Perkins, University of Southern California
