

International Law and the Environment

Patricia Birnie, Alan Boyle, Catherine Redgwell
Download PDF | ePub | DOC | audiobook | ebooks*

#1625596 in Books Oxford University Press, USA 2009-03-15
Ingredients: Example Ingredients
Original language: English
PDF # 1 6.60 x 1.60 x 9.60l, 2.81 #File Name: 0198764227830 pages | File size: 51.Mb

Patricia Birnie, Alan Boyle, Catherine Redgwell : International Law and the Environment before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised International Law and the Environment:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Lighter than the books sold in Europe (paper)By J. PedrosoI love the fact that my book was printed in recycled papers and for that it was much lighter than the books printer in white paper. This was the best price I could find in USA and Europe! I super recommend this book.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. happy customerBy okeno hannaI love the way tgis book look. Very happy with this purchase. I will definitely recommend it. Very good buy0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Good resourceBy KaterinaI used this book as a resource for my LLM thesis and it proved very useful. It provides good background knowledge on the evolution of environmental law in international law. I wish it had some case summaries though.

As conservation of the environment plays an increasingly important role within society, International Law and the Environment continues to be the essential read for students and practitioners alike. International Law and the Environment, while remaining rooted within the substantive law, places legislation on the protection of the environment firmly at the core of its current context. Written by three of the foremost experts in this field, the authors employ sharp and thorough analysis of the laws, allowing them to share their extensive knowledge and experience with the reader. The authors provide a unique perspective on the implications of International regulation, promoting a wider understanding of the pertinent issues impacting upon the law. This edition features extended treatment of Genetically Modified Organisms and biotechnology as well as the implications of ethics and the environment. It also benefits from new material covering the role of the International Maritime Organization and Non-Governmental Organizations, which continue to grow in their influence over legislative provisions. These revisions ensure that not only does International Law and the Environment remain at the forefront of developments but continues to provide the most complete coverage of the growing subject of environmental law.

"A very welcome addition to the growing list of books on international environmental law. This is perhaps the best single book thus far in this rapidly evolving area of global concern. Written in a very accessible style, the book covers the entire landscape of issues, related treaties, and other material concerning ecological quandry in sufficient detail while maintaining the economy of expression. It is an impressive presentation of complex issues and not so easily accessible material. It is an excellent text book for use in college and law schools; the material can be effectively utilized in several specialty courses such as: international studies, environmental affairs, and environmental law....The authors must be congratulated for producing a fine book. Most certainly the book has established itself as the first comprehensive textbook on international environmental law."--Dickinson Journal of Environmental Law Policy"[A]n authoritative 'nutshell' of the law concerning protection of the world's environment."--American Society of International Law"A streamlined introduction to the field....Each topic is presented clearly and thoroughly, with useful footnotes to relevant decisions and documents."--Yale Journal of International LawAbout the AuthorPatricia Birnie is a Visiting Fellow at the London School of Economics and Political Science. Alan Boyle is a Professor of Public International Law at the University of Edinburgh. Catherine Redgwell is a Professor of International Law and Vice-Dean at University College, London.