This multidisciplinary volume brings together recent findings of scholars working in southeastern mission studies. Aiming to understand native and colonial Spanish inhabitants, it addresses the effects of missionization through archaeology, history, bio-archaeology, zoo-archaeology and ethnobotany.

From Booklist Unlike the Spanish missions of the Southwest which were of adobe, those in Florida were of wood, and in any case were destroyed in 1703 through attacks by the British allied with the Creeks. So this gathering of research from various writers is mostly detective work, deducing how the Franciscans worked and how the Spanish colonization effort revolved around their missions, as well as how the Timucua, Guale, and Creek Indians interacted with the Spanish. John Mort About the Author Bonnie G. McEwan is the director of archaeology at San Luis Archaeological and Historic Site in Tallahassee.
