too! These people are strong, amazing Americans and non Americans and it reminded me of what our country is built upon and why I LOVE this country. Ms. Silberberg has a way of making you feel inspired without too much sap. She makes you feel like you know the people running these programs and you want to be friends with each and every one of them and help them any way you can. READ this book if you need or want inspiration and BUY this book for anyone you know who thinks they have it rough in life. This will change your way of looking at your own life and America. Well Done.0 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Three StarsBy McCoyNot as enjoyable a read as I was expecting.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Inspired to do more for our communityBy craig pascalI greatly enjoyed reading Visionaries in our Midst. I knew many of the non-profits and non-profit Executive Directors written about in this book. However, now I know so much more about what made the non-profits executives the leaders they are in their communities and in the non-profit industry. I also learned about many other great leaders and their non-profits that I had not heard about before. The book was very informative and inspiring. These leaders and their non-profits have greatly impacted the lives of countless citizens of needs. There is so much to learn from them and you can by reading this book. I was personally inspired to do more for my community after reading this book and I recommend this book to inspire you to learn more about what can be done with hard work and determination to better our society.

Visionaries In Our Midst is Allison Silberberg's inspiring collection of essays that profiles ordinary people who are changing our world. Silberberg shares the stories of individuals who identified critical needs in their communities and responded with courage and conviction. This is a book about those who inspire hope, those who struggle, and those who make something happen. This is a book about catalysts--those who innovate and work to build a better life for others. This is a time to discover what is possible when individuals stand up for one another.

From Publishers WeeklyWhile the media focuses on the economic peril and politicians focus on turf battles, writer and advocate Silberberg profiles amazing people working in the shadow of our nation's capitol finding innovating and expansive ways to serve the citizenry and, in particular, the most vulnerable among us. In the colorful and inspiring stories of 18 "visionaries," Silberberg finds nonprofit Bright Beginnings serving homeless families just a few blocks from the U.S. Capitol, Life Pieces to Masterpieces helping African American youth through artistic expression, the CEO and founder of Mary's Center for Maternal and Child Care, the founder of the Georgetown Senior Center, the former D.C. police officer who created an after-school family and child support center called the Fishing School, and more. Silberberg, a veteran of nonprofit work, captures the motives and methods of these citizens with compassion, detailing their personal histories and obstacles--child advocacy group founder Aretha Lyles, for instance, was a single mother of three--while testifying to the far-reaching power of a determined individual. It is her moments of awareness during visits to various organizations that make this book so effective. Doing good, Silberberg testifies, truly does save and improve lives. ed by Colleen Mondor (ALA's Booklist )A rich authenticity to her book....Silberberg herself might be called a visionary. She writes, "It's about touching another's life, connecting with another human being, being there for them." As Silberberg reminds us, the ways in which we care for each other may be what makes our nation most great. ed by Andi Diehn (ForeWord s) "This is a book of wonders--and hope. It tells us of extraordinary things `ordinary' people can do." --Studs Terkel, oral historian/Pulitzer Prize-winning author "This book will not just help save America; it will help save the world." Pete Seeger, songwriter/song leader
