anyone who thinks they are going to be the savior of a crumbling community and not bother to ask what the people need or want or able contribute to the effort and have it be successful - for the community - they need to read this. It certainly applies to underdeveloped countries or communities - but it also applies to any community or business that has PEOPLE in it ... kinda teaches one such 'manager' or boss how NOT to treat people like machines or robots.² of 2 people found the following review helpful. One of the best books ever written!By Sue RonnenkampWhat a powerful book on change and transformation, filled with a world of wisdom and inspiration for what's possible. Every person interested in change on any level should read this book. My copy is full of highlighted sections and post-it notes to mark all the great pages I want to refer back to for my work. I loved the stories used in the book - but not only this, the way the authors were able to take me (the reader)on a journey to areas all over the world and show me how transformation occurred in these locations was truly remarkable. Photos are also used perfectly in this book to better make the people and the examples come to life. I just can't recommend this book highly enough. If I could, I'd give it 10 stars!¹ of 1 people found the following review helpful. Community PartnershipsBy B. StuartI just used this text in a b school course on Managing Community Partnerships with extraordinary success. Every page offered revelatory thinking, produced in vibrant and robust ways. Reading this thought-provoking book will inform your thinking in so many domains. I could not do the work Wheatley and Frieze do but I am grateful to them for their intrepid spirit as well as the very generous gift they make available to anyone willing to "get it". Check out the web pages that attend this work for interesting videos and see for yourself. This book leaves me with hope and joy in a seemingly difficult world. [...]

No One Is Coming to Help. Now What?

"If there is any hope for us, it lies in rediscovering and recreating community. Do not doubt this is possible. Read Walk Out Walk On and see for yourself--and see your self." (Peter Senge,author ofThe Fifth Discipl)"A cliffhanger of a football novel bristling with social, personal, familial and ethical issues to complement the gridiron action.... All the goods for the sports enthusiastand more."From the Back Cover "If there is any hope for us, it lies in rediscovering and recreating community. Do not doubt this is possible. Read Walk Out Walk On and see for yourself--and see your self."--Peter Senge, author of The Fifth Discipline and coauthor of Presence and The Necessary Revolution "Exuberant and galvanizing, this book takes us to where the future is happening--not in the corridors of power but at the grassroots where a 'trans-local' movement is unleashing human creativity and smarts."--Joanna Macy, author of World as Lover, World as Self "This book gives insight and beauty to what is becoming the new, new world--an intimate journey with communities and citizens cre- ating a future with their own hearts, hands, and relationships."--Peter Block, author of Community and coauthor of The Abundant Community Margaret Wheatley was cofounder and president of The Berkana Institute; Deborah Frieze succeeded her.
