Author kindly included a poem of mine in the book.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Women's War Memoirs by Rosemary Eckroat BachleBy Marilyn G. MasonThis treasury of memoirs written by women who were from Oklahom about their experiences during WW2 is without a doubt the best compilation of well written prose and poetry which makes the sacrifices of those brave women and all women in America who experienced similar lives during this period of history, come alive. I felt ashamed for any complaining I did during my own life time. My generation doesn't have a clue. This is a must read. I'm proud to call Oklahoma my home now. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. WONDERFUL! A collection of short stories from women of WWII By Customer This is a great collection of true short stories from women of WWII. Some are funny, some are sad, all bring you a little closer to what life was like 60 years ago. This is a great book to read piece at a time, since each story is independent of one another.

The book provides an intimate look at a hidden corner of women's history--their wartime experiences during World War II. It includes interviews with nurses, military women, prisoners-of-war and pilots, as well as women who served on the home front as brakemen, welders, riggers, truckers and riveters.

About the Author Rosemary Bachle is a published poet and author, noted businesswoman and realtor, and loving mother and housewife. She graduated from Oklahoma City University in 1996--more than 50 years after her education was interrupted by World War II. She is an active member of several writing organizations. Bachle resides in Oklahoma City with her husband, Leonard, where they raised six children.
